

NAME: Apollo

GENDER: Male

DATE OF BIRTH: June 5, 2021

Apollo was rescued by a volunteer with a partner rescue in West Virginia. She had seen him outside her house and began feeding him to see if he would make a good indoor cat for an adopter. He seemed to like the idea of getting regular meals and eventually would stick around afterward for pets and conversation. As time went by, she was able to gain his trust and get him into a carrier for a vet visit. He did great and is now available for adoption through 4Paws Rescue Team.

Apollo is still a little confused about how he ended up with all these strange kitties, but he enjoys the interactions with his caretakers and is gentle in his habits. Apollo met other cats in his foster environment and gets along with them as long as they are friendly and patient. Apollo is still relatively young so may do best with another animal in his house to keep him company. He should get along with most home environments once he is settled in. He has not been tested against dogs but should do OK if properly introduced into the home and the dog is friendly and calm.

Apollo has been vaccinated against rabies and distemper, is FIV and FeLV negative, and has been microchipped and neutered. He has been eating Purina True Instinct grain-free kibble and Fancy Feast classic pate.
